POLITICAL NOTES.

—President Grant is on a tour through the West.

—Pensions to widows have been increased two dollars per month.

—A bill to sell eggs by weight was defeated in the Massachusetts Legislature.

—Congressman M. M. Walden, of Iowa, has given his extra pay to the school fund of his county.

—The Dayton Journal intimates that General Schenck will be a candidate for U. S. Senator.

—Hon. John T. Wilson is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor of Ohio.

—The Iowa Republicans are to hold their State nominating Convention in Des Moines, Wednesday, June 25.

—The Spaniards are in a profound stew. The volunteers have revolted and the leaders are hiding themselves.

—It is suggested that the Modocs be consigned to Oakes Ames, that he will put them where they will do the most good.

—Gen. Jefferson C. Davis is on his way to take command of the Department of Columbia in place of Gen. Canby, deceased.

—Morton McMichael is the best after-dinner speaker in this or any other country. Save and except Ex-Gov. A. G. Curtin.

—Ex-Congressman S. S. Cox, of New York, is announced as intending to have his back pay returned to the United States Treasury.

—The Republican State Central Committee will meet at Harrisburg, on Thursday, May 1st, to fix the time for the State Convention.

—The Secretary of the Treasury has ordered the payment, without rebate, on and after Monday, the 18th inst., of the interest due on bonds May 1st.

—Washington Townsend and John Scott are the only members of Congress from Pennsylvania who have peremptorily and positively refused to draw the back pay.

—In consequence of the payment of warrants for a very large amount of money, this month, Secretary Richardson does not anticipate a large reduction in the public debt.

—Negotiations for a new postal treaty with France are still pending with the French Minister at Washington, who has been given authority in the matter by his Government.

—Mr. Colfax began a temperance address in Indiana recently, by pronouncing a eulogy on Governor Hendricks and the Legislature for "the best of all temperance laws ever given to any people."

—President Grant says he will sanction the severest measures deemed necessary to properly punish the Modoc Indians who so cowardly assassinated Gen. Canby and two of the Peace Commissioners during a peace conference, in Oregon, on Tuesday of week before last.

—The Internal Revenue Assessors having been mustered out, large numbers of them are besieging the department for appointments as deputy collectors. So when the government dispenses with collectors these gentlemen will seek to be pensioned on it in some other capacity.

—General Butler left Washington for his home last Friday. He is a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination in Massachusetts, and is confident of success. He reckons confidently upon the support of Messrs. Wilson and Boutwell, and says that if elected the next Presidency will be the next prize of his ambition, and they are hopeful of his success.

—The "conscience money" fund is growing to be one of the institutions of the Treasury Department at Washington. If one-half of those who have grown rich upon frauds upon the government were only to be conscience stricken, and make restitution of their ill-gotten gains, what a handsome sum would be accumulated. It would help materially to reduce the public debt.

THE ridiculous flurry which the New York papers made on the Curtis resignation is only another evidence of how little there is to censure in the conduct of the Administration. While we cheerfully testify to the scholarship and editorial ability of Mr. Curtis, we are fully convinced that all the most impracticable and unpopular features of the civil service rules were devised or suggested by him, and that civil service reform is likely to be the gainer by his resignation. In fact his resignation is a matter entirely personal to himself, and not of the slightest consequence, either to the civil service, the Administration, or to the country at large. We have no doubt Mr. Curtis himself regrets the unwarrantable manner in which his name has been used.

IN KEEPING with the silly comments of the Democratic journals on the staff assignment of General Sheridan are the comments from the same source over the considerate action of the Secretary of War in ordering Lieutenant Grant to report at Washington on the 4th of March. We can hardly conceive of a man so mean and selfish as to begrudge the President's son the slight pleasure of seeing his father inaugurated for the second time. A soldier has feeling, sympathy, and affection, the same as other men, and to deny the exercise of either, when the gratification affects no public interest, would be as unjust as it would be unreasonable.

We presume our Democratic neighbors will carefully nurse this little item for the next campaign. It will make a respectable sized plank in their platform, and as they are sorely pressed for timber, they should secure this one to illustrate "the personal government" over which they have shed tears since the otherthrow of their impersonal model, the Southern Confederacy. Think of "our modern Caesar" allowing the eye of his son to rest upon him on the 4th of March. What next in the way of imperial government? The same authority that allowed the young lieutenant to nearly freeze in his saddle while allowing the paternal Caesar to take the oath and read his address can allow the same young officer to enter the White House and sit down at the table with the chief of the nation. Let Schurz strike the big drum and alarm the nation! The President's son was in Washington on the 4th of March. He made free with his father's cigars. He stood amid the crowd at the east front of the Capitol, and was seen to smile when the Chief Justice vainly tried to protect his venerable head from the sweeping wind that played havoc with the locks of great men. Here is the outcropping of a conspiracy to overturn our government. Our opponents have another opportunity to regain their former power. If the visit of Fred Grant to Washington to see his father inaugurated can't save the Democracy, it can never see political salvation again.

HOW TO BRING ABOUT REFORM.

In times of war bad men may win great victories and assume positions of power without the consent of the people. Ambition, energy, genius, are the elements that win against popular will in times of public disturbance. But in politics the rule is reversed, or should be. No man can gain political power without the consent of the people. A single vote can defeat the man of energy and ambition. At the head of an army he might control the nation, but before the silent voice of the ballot-box he is powerless. Herein lies the strength of our institutions. The people govern, and no man can assume power unless called by the voice of the majority. If bad men are elected to office it is the fault of the people, not the system which tolerated the election. The remedy is with the people. The same power that placed a bad man in power can soon displace him. Corrupt men have crept into power, either under false pretenses or through chicanery or fraud. They do not truly represent the people or the party that elected them. Their numbers are small, but this can be no excuse for their continuance. How can the party purify itself of these unworthy members? Democracy answers: Destroy the party, that is responsible for their presence. This would be the destruction of a magnificent temple to get rid of a few imperfections in the structure. The Republican party to-day is the temple of freedom. Its foundation is as solid as the granite rocks of New England. The edifice which has been building for the past sixteen years is as perfect as human ingenuity can make it. It has few faults—a few imperfect blocks mar its beauty. Common sense points out the remedy. Remove them, put substantial ones in their place, and the political structure remains unimpaired.

The people must exercise more care in the selection of public officials. Men must be chosen for their honesty as well as their ability. Private morality should be the basis of public virtue. Select good men for office and official corruption will soon be unknown.

How can this selection be made? The answer is as simple as the question. Take part in the selection! To ignore the primary meeting, and accept as a party necessity, the choice of others, is to invite the evil we complain of. There are tens of thousands of citizens who would stand in line for hours or lose a day to deposit their vote, who could not be induced to attend the primary meeting and take part in the selection of candidates. They overlook the most important part of their duty—the choice of the men for whom they are willing to work and vote.

The good men of the nation must take a more active part in its politics. They must help create tickets as well as endorse them. They must take a leading part in the primary meetings, assume the control of our conventions and thus give character and stability to the politics of the day.

There is too much apathy among those who are or should be the leading men of our party in all local matters. The enthusiasm and active zeal displayed in our national elections should be carried into our State and county elections. With constant zeal and united effort it is in the power of the Republican party to always retain its supremacy in the State, and in a short time to overthrow the rotten and corrupt rule in Centre county.

(For the REPUBLICAN.)

ON THE WING, April —, 1873.

Centre county derives its name from its geographical position, being about central in the State. It was formed into a county in 1800, and is therefore about seventy-three years of age. When formed, the new county contained about the population of Bellefonte. It has some of the most beautiful valleys in the State, which were covered with forests at that time, and have been made valuable by the hard work of many farmers, who lie buried near the scenes of their labors. There are a few who now live upon the lands that have been cleared by their own hands.

It is pleasant to sit down with some of these old farmers and listen to their story of the early settlers of Nittany Valley. The writer of this article had such an hour's pleasure quite recently, while passing an evening at the house of Mr. David Lamb. His farm is on the road from Bellefonte to Jacksonville, something over five miles from the former place. The owner of this farm is now 77 years of age, and when a young man moved into woods, took off his coat, rolled up his sleeves, and, axe in hand, hewed himself out a home and is spending the evening of his days upon the farm cleared with his own hands, every acre of which has been met with the sweat of honest toil. It is this kind of hard work that has enriched our great State, and made her valleys the scenes of so much wealth and happiness. Any person who has a taste for the beautiful may gratify it, by a ride down this smiling valley during the month of June. Or, if one would wish to spend an hour in pleasant chat, he can gratify his wishes by calling upon the veteran husbandmen, and spending the time in agreeable converse.

The evening above alluded to was spent in listening to our venerable friend as he called to mind the early settlers of Bellefonte, and told humorous tales of those olden times. He called up the story of Dunlop and Miles, and their connection with the location of the county seat—how Dunlop traveled while Miles slept, and how Bellefonte, and not Milesburg, became the county seat. He was personally acquainted with the men of sixty years ago, who laid the foundation of society in this wild and then uncultivated region. He has seen the huge forests of Nittany Valley fall before the axe, as he has seen nearly all those old men fall before the scythe of time. He could tell of the Greggs, and Burnsides, and Hustons, and Benners, whom he has outlived, but whom he has not forgotten. Such an evening, in such company, is not easily forgotten, as we thus hold converse with the dead past. Such a one dwells upon the past, and feasts upon its shadows.

At a late hour we reluctantly retire to rest, to dream of old times, huge trees, deer and bears and panthers. It seemed but a short time when, refreshed by "Nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep," we are called to breakfast, smoking hot upon the table, which Mrs. L. prepares with her own hands.

We propose, Mr. Editor, to visit the farms and notice the farming interests of the county, and give the results of our observations to your columns. We shall take a peep into our furnaces and forges, look down into our iron mines, for we dare not go down into those dark shafts. This will give us fine amusement during the heat of summer, when it is so necessary to keep cool.

ALPHA.

—A recent dispatch from North Platte, Neb, reports that a party of Meneroghe Indians are on the war path on Barnt Wood creek near that point. The troops stationed there together with armed citizens have gone in pursuit of the Indians who threaten to murder all settlers in that territory in retaliation on whites for killing an Indian a few weeks since.

—Spanish veils are being much worn, fastened in the hair with the bright red rose which is indispensable in an Andalusian toilet.

—Commercial travelers from other states, in Richmond, Va., are expected to pay not only a state tax of $25, but also a special city licence fee.

—The Chicago and Railway Company have recommenced setting out hedge plants along the line of their road.

—Two thousand men have been called to join the organization of the new mission (Mormon) to San Francisco mountain, Arizona.

—Geneva lake, Wis., has been stocked with 5000 salmon trout, the gift of a former townsman, Senator R. H. Baker, now a resident of Racine.

—Twenty bushels of acorns were planted along the main line of the Pacific road, in Minnesota last year.

THE DOMESTIC INFELICITIES OF THE JUSTHE FAMILY—THE SCANDAL MONGERS' BANQUET—AN INTERESTING LIBEL SUIT—A BLACKMAILER IN TROUBLE—THE SPRING FASHIONS.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

NEW YORK, April 28, 1873.

THE DOMESTIC INFELICITIES

of the Justhe family is very thoroughly shown to the public through the courts, and a more deplorable case has never been ventilated. The high social position of the parties, the beauty, wit and accomplishments of the lady tend to increase the interest felt in the case, and as the parties to the suit are known all over the country, the scandal mongers are enjoying a delicious banquet. The sensational and prominent Sunday newspapers fairly revel in columns of the evidence, and publish letters by the score which emanated from the lady, and very high spiced they are. Sermons are preached upon the texts the letters furnish and wordly-wise people utter long homilies to enforce upon the mind the moral which is conveyed by this most deplorable case, and who heeds either sermon or speech? To remedy these things the foundations must be laid in the youthful training of girls, not for the glare of the saloons, but for the glow of the hearthstone.

THE WINSTON-ENGLISH LIBEL SUIT

is just now a prominent topic of gossip on 'Change and at the clubs, and of late some interesting disclosures have been made from which it appears that there is now in Ludlow street jail one Stephen English, an ex-policeman from Leeds, England, and an ex-waiter from the Alhambra, a noted low music and dance hall in Leicester Square, London, and an ex-editor(?) of a little sheet which was set up ostensibly to discuss insurance, but which soon took form and shape similar to a blackmail "organ." It was not long until English's attacks upon leading public men got him into trouble, and he was locked up for libelling Mr. F. S. Winston, President of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of this city. English petitioned the Legislature and after the most approved formula, begged and prayed their honorable body, that as he was "deprived of his personal liberty" their honorable body would take such measures as would do away with the aforesaid "deprivation." Some little of the usual and very American-like spread-eagleism necessary in such cases was done, and his petition referred to the Committee on Grievances. This is a hungry crowd. They had not up to this time had a chance to "investigate" anything or anybody, consequently had not made a dollar during the session. But this looked like a big thing. There was money in it, they thought, and so a majority rushed down here without authority—held a meeting at Ludlow street jail, heard English's story, and the next meeting was held at the Metropolitan Hotel to "investigate the management of the company"—a curious turn to the outsider. Only one witness was heard at this meeting, one McCullock, a broker in unrectified hogs' grease, and his evidence merely established the fact that he considers himself fitter to be a shining luminary in the insurance world, than to drag out a miserable existence examining the entrails of deceased swine with a view to ascertain the amount of oleaginous matter to be derived therefrom. The committee, however, made a cats-paw of McCullock, and suddenly ascertaining that they had no authority to be here, concluded to make a bold stroke for a stake and leave. They undertook to put on the pressure. They wanted to be "seen," but the Mutual wouldn't "see" them to the extent of a dime, consequently the profanity was terrible as they left for Albany. They ignored the poor devil in Ludlow street jail who was howling about being "deprived of his personal liberty." The complaints and charges on which all of this uproar is based have been examined and exploded at least four separate times to our knowledge, by the State Insurance Department, the Legislative Committee on Insurance, to whom all things of this kind properly belong, and by the policy holders and the people most interested in a wise, honest and economical management of the company, as well as the press and the general public extol not only the manner in which the Mutual is conducted, but the pluck and firmness of its officers, who neither will be blackmailed by an organ nor a ring.

THE SPRING FASHIONS

will never be seen this spring unless the weather changes, as it still snows daily with great regularity. However our modistes have been as busy as bees, and now unless the sun shines soon, they will be utterly ruined. The summer novelties of Paris are reproduced here and will appear simultaneously at Newport, Saratoga and the French haunts of Fashion. For example is a suit of new canvass guipure ecrue linen, in square meshes like canvass grenadine. A flounce covered with embroidery trims the skirt. The overskirt is wrought in polka dots and edged with yak lace. the basque is also polka-dotted, with yak insertion outlining a vest. The self colored dress is brightened by bows and sash of scarlet watered ribbon. Black tulle and grenadine will be much worn this season, though our best modistes do not use the heavy jet trimming now in vogue on grenadine in Paris. If the spring time ever does come, we will tell you what is worn.

STATE NEWS.

—A Clearfield county biblical scholari believes that the garden of Eden was on this continent, down in the region of the Lower Mississippi.

—A young man while visiting Lock Haven last week was relieved of a gold watch and chain by a companion, who was arrested and locked up to await a hearing.

—A subscription is on foot in Reading, to furnish the balloonatic Danaldson with an air ship for his proposed trans-Atlantic journey through the clouds.

—The school teachers of Dauphin and Mifflin counties applied to the Legislature for pay for time while attending teachers' institutes. They got a bill through the house.

—It is stated that Mr. W. H. Brown, an engineer of ability, has been authorized to survey a line for a railroad from Bedford to Johnstown, there to connect with the Pennsylvania Central.

—The Allentown News says: "We hear of a lady school-teacher who dreamt the other night she was up in a balloon with Donaldson. When she awoke she was sitting on the head board throwing the pillows down for ballast."

—The licensed liquor dealers of Danville have resolved to pay no attention to the Local Option law. Unless the the temgerance men adopt measures for its enforcement, their efforts avail them nothing.

—Pennsylvania which used to be highest in the production of wheat is now sixth on the list, Illinois with 30 million, Iowa with 20, Ohio and Indiana with 27 each, and Wisconsin with 25, each, all coming before Pennsylvania's 19 millions of bushels.

—Judge Bucher, like a sensible judge, decided in Mifflin county last week, that there was nothing in the omission of the return judges to meet at the court house to count up the vote on the license question. The county voted no license and the court refused to grant any.

—A Danbury man imagined himself a hen, and while under the influence of that conceif sat down on a dozen eggs, and hatched out an Italian sunset and a circus poster. His wife removed the debris with the bald end of a broom.

—A body was found on Thursday evening of last week at Rochester, bearing strong marks of resemblance to that of Thomas Hazlett, who was drowned here some time ago. His nephew, Samuel Hazlett, was telegraphed for, and left for Rochester immediately.—Pittsburgh Mail.

Pennsylvania may be well called the iron State as its product in pig, bloom, forged and rolled iron together with iron bolts, nuts, washers, rivets, nails, spikes, pipe and castings is set down at the sum of $178,701,907, in addition to which machinery and boilers to the value of $29,258,153 are manufactured, besides nearly $7,000,000 worth of steel.

—During a thunder storm on the 5th inst., a little daughter of Chas Lincosh, residing at Burnside Colliery, Shamokin, Penn'a. became frightened at a vivid flash of lightning which caused her death a few hours afterwards, aged about five years. This is the second death from the same cause, the first being that of a boy of the same age which happened several years ago.—Freeburg Courier.

—On Saturday last while John Silknitter, Henderson township, Huntingdon county, was riding in a buggy with Asahel Corbine, near Huntingdon, the horse took fright at a locomotive, ran away and Mr. Silknitter was thrown out of the buggy upon a pile of stones, producing concussion of the brain, from which he died in a few hours. He was about 28 years of age and unmarried.—Blair Co. Radical.

—A young and handsome lady of this city took one of the express trains for Harrisburg, a few days since, intending to meet a lover at that point, all necessary arrangements having been made for an elopement. Her trunk was packed full to the attic with her Sunday fixins' and sich, and her happiness was complete. The telegraph was brought into requisition and of course the lady was arrested upon her arrival in Harrisburg. Then she wasn't so happy. An officer accompanied her on the return trip to this city and she is once more under the paternal roof, and the Tribune readers are denied the pleasure of reading a sensational item which would have been highly colored.

Poetry.

THE LITTLE GIRL AT NYE'S

"There's a little girl at Nye's!'
So the neighbors said, with sighs.
'She has lost her way, we fear,
Poor lone birdie, nestling here,
In a home so dark and dreary,
With a father who is wasting,
His strong life,—to ruin hasting.
Yes she's surely gone astray,
God ne'er sent her here,' they say.

Ah! we've eyes, but cannot see,
Deaf, uncertain ears have we:
God is still a mystery

For the little girl at Nye's,
With her sweet and loving eyes,
In her home a very beam
Of the cherry sun did seem.

Till the mother half forgot
All the hardships of her lot,
And the father, with a smile,
Thinks of each bewitching wile,
Toiling all the harder now,
Wiping off his heated brow,
'Quickly must the work be done,
I must go at set of sun,
Or, she grieves, my little one,'

Tied at home with cords so slender,
Baby lisps, and cooings tender,
Cords so slender yet so strong,
They will keep his feet from wrong.

And his lawless friends of old
Sneered, then coaxed, and then grew cold.

But, alas one wintry day,
Mournfully the neighbors say
'Baby's dead!'
And they lightly tread, and low
Whisper of the parents' woe,
And sweet flowers they softly strew,
Wet with tears, as once with dew,
Round her head.

And the mother, day by day,
Folds so carefully away
Baby's things,
Thinking, with a happy smile
Through her falling tears, the while,
'Seraphs cannot stray below,
Heaven wanted thee, and so
God sent wings,
But He'll take care of thee,
He will keep thee still for me.'

Paler grew the father's brow,
And the comrades whisper, 'Now,
When his heart is crushed and sore,
He will come to us once more.
Let the foaming, sparkling glasses
Tempt him daily as he passes.'
Tempt him! yes, but he is strong;
Hear his answer to the throng.

'I will give you this to ponder:
I've an angel waiting yonder,
Waiting, aye though time be slow,
And years pass before I go.
Surely, surely, then 'tis meet
That my lips be pure and sweet
For her greeting
At the meeting.
Think you, comrades, that for this
I'd give up my baby's kiss!'

So 'the little gift at Nye's
Was an angel from the skies,—
Was a bit of God's own smile,
Shining on them for awhile,
For awhile! It shineth ever,
God's own smile is darkened never.

Our Story Teller.

THE TAWNY MUSTACHE.

She saw him first on the corner of Maine and Chippewa Streets. This is how it happened. It was in a heavy snow storm; she was in the cutter with Delia Howe, and was driving. They were dashing around the corner, he crossed the street. The wind was blowing the snow into her face in a blinding fashion, so she never saw him, until her horse was stopped by a strong hand on the bridle. It was done so suddenly, it almost threw Delia and herself from the seat. She had come very near running over him. Of course it was her place to beg pardon; but, instead, she flashed an indignant glance at him, for having presumed to lay hand on her horse, and saw a heavily built gentleman, whose great coat and fur cap were completely white with snow. He still had his hand on the bridle, as if waiting for her to speak; as she did not do so, he coolly twirled his tawny mustache, with the hand not employed, and said "Your apology is accepted!" then walked on.

The horse, as suddenly as he had been stopped, dashed ahead at a furious rate; as she did not succeed in getting him fully under her control and broken into an even trot, until they had struck Delaware Avenue. Then, for the first time, the two girls looked at each other.

"Did you ever know such unparalleled impudence?" Her cheeks were brilliant; her eyes flashing with the excitement of taming her infuriated horse.

"He came near being our death!" gasped Delia, looking as if she was going to faint.

"I should actually enjoy running over such a man," said Hagar, to whom the "unparalleled impudence" seemed the all-absorbing theme.

"How we did dash around those corners," and Delia's voice trembled.

"I don't feel as if I could go home without giving it to him," said Hagar.

"I remembered every fib I ever told," from Delia.

"I should know him anywhere; he had a tawny mustache;" from Hagar, and she loosened her sable boa, as if the recollection of the cool manner in which he had twirled said mustache made her warm.

"O dear! I expected fully to be laid out in my new white silk."

There is no knowing how long they would have continued this random conversation, each enlarging on her own thought, without paying the slightest attention to the other if it had not been for this last rather worldly remark of Delia's. Hagar heard it, and laughed.

"On the whole, Del, it is a pity I didn't let Dandy take his course, we could have gone out of this world in style. Hadley's party would of course have been given up, and I would have made a last dying request to buried in my gorgeous new pink silk. Wouldn't I have cut a gay figure in my coffin?"

"O, Hagar! How can you talk so recklessly, when we have just escaped with our lives?" And the little color that had come into Delia's face receded. Hagar laughed.

"Why, Del, is pink silk any wickeder than white? Besides, you silly little thing, we weren't any place near our death; Dandy wouldn't have dared kill me!"

"Why?" asked Delia.

"Because he knew very well, that if he did, on my way up, I would dispatch a message down below, for his satanic majesty to kindly send a handful of small imps to haunt his stall, and mix sulphur and powdered brimstone with his oats." There was a mischievous twinkle in her black eyes, though she spoke in her gravest tones.

"Hagar Southey, how can you?"

At that moment she drew rein before Mr. Howe's residence. Hagar saw the girl safely on the sidewalk; then said, sarcastically, "Never mind, Dellie, when Lent comes you will see how good I will be;" and drove on, while Delia went into the house, saying to herself, "I wonder what makes Hagar Southey so ironical? She turns everything into sarcasm, and is full as wild as Dandy."

The next time she saw him was at Hadley's grand party on Delaware Avenue. She was robed in that "gorgeous new pink silk," gotten for the occasion. It just suited her marked brilliant style. One would have singled her out the instant one entered the room. She was, as usual holding a levee; the centre of a group of gentlemen, made up partly of exquisites who live on the froth of life, and partly of sensible, dignified men, all held by the charm of her conversation. She was witty and sarcastic; she made them first laugh, then think. It was wonderful how many homely truths, and pointed home-thrusts, this girl covered with the guise of fun and irony. Her voice was low and cultivated, and never changed its soft musical utterance, no matter how animated or discordant her theme.

He was standing outside the circle, apparently giving unbroken attention to the insipid platitudes of the passe belle. His organs of hearing must have been remarkably keen, for he answered correctly every time, and yet heard every word that passed in the circle. At length glancing up she caught his eye. The recognition was instantaneous. Her face flashed; he coolly twirled his tawny mustache, and contradicted some trifling remark of the passe beauty's, who looked at him in blank amaze.

At that moment one of Straus' waltzes floated through the rooms. He abruptly excused himself to his astonished companion, who had been counting on his asking her to dance; saying, as he did not waltz himself, he might be the means of preventing her. As the dancers began to sway through the rooms, he sauntered to the conservatory. Fannie Hadley saw him go, and followed him. He was their guest, thus it was her right, and the most casual observer might see that it was her pleasure. From the conservatory door, where they stood, they had a fine view of the dancers. Fannie was gay and lively, and had a bit of characteristic information about each, as they glided past. Her fresh, school-girlish ways—for she was but sixteen, and not in society yet, evidently pleased and amused him.

Presently Hagar Southey floated by. "That is the most beautiful girl in Buffalo," said Fannie, enthusiastically; then added, "Everybody is in love with her, even Joe would actually put himself out to win her, and you know how lazy he is."

He was Joe's visitor—they had been friends for years; of course he asked her name. A moment later Delia Howe entered the conservatory on her partner's arm. They stopped to speak to Fannie, and were introduced to the stranger. Delia did not recognize him; he knew her instantly, and before the evening was out, she was highly flattered by the attention he gave her. Once, when she and Hagar happened to be a minute together, she went into ecstacies over this stranger, Joe Hadley's friend, finished with the question—

"Hagar, who does he look like? It has puzzled me ever since I was introduced.

"Himself," was the abrupt reply.

"But he must look like some one, or his face would not be so familiar, for I never saw him before," persisted Delia.

"You only think so!" was the provoking reply, and Hagar was gone. Delia naturally took the answer for the first part of her remark, and pouted.

A few minutes later, Hagar Southey was listening to a very sentimental offer of marriage in the conservatory. She ejected the young fop, and he went away with dejected mien, his very mustache looking wilted. She turned to retrace her steps to the drawing-room, and there, seated within full hearing, shielded by the shrubbery, sat Joe Hadley's friend. Her eyes flashed, he coolly twirled his tawny mustache again, and rose to let her pass. She swept by him, her head erect, the folds of her silk drapery brushing his feet in the narrow passage. He watched her out of sight, then whistling a low tune, comfortably took his chair again.

About an hour later, she met him face to face on the door-step. She looked like a white cloud in her zephyr wraps. He had just been assisting the passe beauty, who had come without an escort to her carriage. He had on the identical great coat and fur cap; even Delia Howe might have known him them. So surprised was she at meeting him that she failed to notice the single step from the vestibule; her escort had gone ahead so she must have fallen the entire flight, if he had not caught her; yet she would rather have fallen than have been thus saved. So annoyed was she, that even her innate courtesy forsook her. She had actually been in his arms, and her ungloved hand, thrown wildly out to catch herself, had absolutely touched his tawny mustache.

He waited an instant; then, as she did not thank him, said in the same cool way he had that other day in the storm, "You are perfectly welcome," and went into the house.

On the way home she had not a word to say. They had but a block to drive. All that block she was drawing on her gloves, as if thinking thus to cover up the memory of the touch of that long silky mustache. But she must have failed signally, for when she had reached home and gained her own room, the first thing she did was to pull the glove off, which she had but just got on, and look at the hand it had covered. A singularly childish act for the brilliant, sarcastic Hagar Southey; but any one who knows any woman well knows that woman is a contradiction.

After that, all winter long, she seldom went out of an evening without meeting him. He was very wealthy, and had been traveling abroad ever since he and Joe left college; he had no home ties, so had very willingly allowed Joe Hadley to persuade him to winter in Buffalo. Such being the facts of the case, more than one pretty girl had found it remarkably easy so smile upon him.

Hagar Southey had of course been introduced to him, but there their acquaintance seemed to end, that is, so far as conversation goes to make acquaintance. Yet the girl felt that this Mr. Klemn, Joe Hadley's friend, knew her singularly well. Struggle against it as she would, he had an odd, irresistible fascination for her; even on entering a crowded building, her eyes, as if by magnetism, instantly singled him out.

This girl had never received more attention, or refused more lovers, than she did that winter. Even Joe Hadley, lazy fellow that he was, made the effort to win her; but when he failed, took it good-naturedly, and did not fret over it, so their friendship was never suspended even for a moment.

Once, in her half-merry, half-earnest way she asked him, "if his friend was as easy as himself?" Joe came nearer being excited then than she had ever seen him.

"Easy! By Jupiter, Miss Hagar, I wish you knew Bert Klemn; his coolness is enough to rouse anybody. If fire could be frozen, it would be like him. It would serve you right to lose your heart to him, Miss Hagar, after all you have put us fellows through this winter."

"Why?" she demanded, curtly.

"Because I believe you would have to find it again. He has his emotions so under his control that I doubt if he could love."

After that one day Delia Howe dropped in to have a chat with Hagar, and and entering her room unbidden, found her standing in the open window. Before her, lying on the windowsill, was a live coal, that she taken from the grate, and against it was apiece of ice of similar size. The two elements were contending: the fire lived an instant the longer.

"What are you doing?" exclaimed Delia, looking over her shoulder.

"How do you do, Dell?" was the answer she got, and the girl tossed the coal, with its almost extinct flame, into the snow below, and closed the window.

"What have you been doing?" again demanded Delia.

"Satisfying myself that you can't freeze fire: that heat is stronger than cold," was the reply.

"What a queer thing to think of!" said Delia, who set down the act as one of Hagar's oddities, and in a few moments forgot it.

She had come for her to go to the Rink, and skate. Hagar ordered Dandy and the cutter, and in a few minutes they were on the way. When within a block of the Rink, Hagar suddenly reined up the horse. There was a ragged little urchin sitting on the curbstone, crying in a dumb pitiful way with the cold.

"What is the matter, little boy?" demanded Hagar. The child, used to bearing his troubles in silence, and having all the reticence of long-accustomed poverty, stared at her in amazement. She repeated the question.

"O fy, Hagar, drive on! You are attracting attention; and see, there comes Mr. Klemn," said Delia, in an annoyed tone.

"Be still, Del. Who cares for Mr. Klemn? I am going to know what is the matter with this youngster if all the city gathers to listen," was the unceremonious reply. Delia was instantly silenced. Mr. Klemn had heard every word, and had quietly joined the crowd of boys that were curiously collected on the curbstone, at seeing a fine lady stop her sleigh to talk to a ragged urchin.

Again came the question: "Little boy, what is the matter?"

"Cold," was the laconic reply.

"Well, why didn't you say so at first," with a queer mingling of kindness and impatience. Then she turned to Delia.

"Del, if you object to riding with that youngster, you can get out. There is only a block to walk."

"What do you intend to do?" from Delia.

"Take him home, and stand him over the register," she said, with a comical face, to hide the quiver of pity on her lips. Delia attempted to argue; it was useless. Hagar tossed back the robes, and left her no choice; so she got out. Mr. Klemn had been looking on in his cool, inpenetrable way. Delia turned to him, expecting him to take her skates and escort her to the Rink, to which he evidently was bound, when to her astonishment she saw him gently lift the ragged urchin into the sleigh, then spring to the seat she had but a minute before vacated, take the reins from Hagar's hands, and turn the horse's head homeward. In that instant she recognized him, and watched them out of sight, saying over and over to herself, "Well, I never!"

Hagar Southey was like one dazed with surprised. Here was this "unparalleled impudence" actually driving the very horse he had stopped! Yet even that thought came second to the wondrous gentleness there had been in his lifting of the little boy. The urchin, had accepted this fate in a dumb, unquestioning way. She wrapped him well in the robe, never glancing at this cool quiet gentleman. Dandy fairly flew. The ride was a silent one. When he had drawn rein before her home, he carried the urchin up into the vestibule, leaving her to follow. When there he stood him on his little frozen, bare feet, and suddenly facing this girl took one of her hands in both of his, and looking down into her startled, wondering eyes, said "Hagar Southey"—not another word, and was gone. She led the child into house—her eyes brilliant, her cheeks vivid, her lips trembling. In that moment she knew that she had met her master, and that she loved him.

The next evening she went to the Rink again—a party called for her in a large sleigh. He was one of the number. She had hardly taken her seat before they began to chaff her about her odd protege, having heard the story from Delia Howe. Her quiet independent retorts soon silenced them. "What was she going to do with him?" "Keep him." "Who did he belong to?" Nobody." "How did she know?" She had made the lawful inquiries. When they reached the Rink, Bert Klemn coolly swung her skates over his shoulders, without even so much as "By your leave," and gave her his arm; then afterward buckled her skates on in that same way as if it was his right. There was a dash of color in her cheeks, and, without thanking him, she started off in her fearless, graceful way.

The night was bitterly cold; there were very few on the Rink, save their party. She was some distance from them all, when turning, she found that he was giving her chase. She increased her speed: her foot struck some slight projection in the ice—she fell, and suddenly all the world was a blank. It was but for an instant. Then she came back into consciousness, with the strange feeling that that tawny mustache, whose touch she had never been able to banish from her recollection, had swept her lips; and she became possessed with the uncomfortable idea that that very touch had had the power to bring her back to life. She was in Bert Klemn's arms, and the others were gathering about in alarm. "There, it is over," she said, sitting erect, and setting her lips to brace herself against a second faint. She was as pale as death. Delia Howe sat down beside her, and tried to make her lean against her, but she said, impatiently, there was nothing the matter, and she was going to skate. Mr. Klemn, in his quiet way bade one of the ladies take off her skates. Resistance was useless. While it was being done, he took off his. Then helping her to arise, he almost carried her from the Rink.

The others were begining to take off their skates, and insist on breaking up the party. He left them urging it, placing her in the sleigh, gave the driver his directions, and sprang to her side. When they reached their destination, he ordered the sleigh back to the Rink in an hour—led her up the steps, and went in with her, though quite unasked. He even coolly stopped in the hall to lay off his overcoat, and fur cap. When he entered the drawing-room, she was seated in an easy chair, her cheeks a brilliant red.

"It was entirely unnecessary. I am as well as ever!" she said, impatiently. He paid no attention to her remark, but drew a chair directly before her, and took both hands in his. She had drawn off her gloves, and tossed them on a chair near by.

The strange feeling about the sweep of that mustache took sudden possession of her. Her eye dropped, her very lip quivered in her effort for control.

"Hagar, resistance is useless. That first day when I stopped your horse, and met the flash of your dark eyes, I determined, if you were not married, you should be my wife."

"Should!" she exclaimed angrily, struggling against his strong will; then snatching away her hands, she sprang to her feet, and paced the room in a nervous, excited way. He sat quietly watching her. Her strength had been broken, so presently she sank in a chair at the other end of the room. He went over and stood beside her, one hand resting on the back of her chair, the other just touching either pale cheek; suddenly they crimsoned.

"Hager, such love as mine is assure to bring love as the magnet to draw the needle. It has already drawn yours. I know it. You cannot hide it" His hand placed under her chin raised her proud head. He bent his, and then, what had been a sensation, became a certain conviction. She knew that this was not the first time that that tawny mustache had swept her lips. Then her innate independance came to her aid. She said, half-shily, half-comically, "Joe Hadley said you were frozen fire; he would have come nearer the truth, if"—she stopped.

"If what?" looking amused.

"Nothing, only that I believe heat is stronger than cold," and she threw aside her wraps. A little later there was a sound of sleigh-bells at the door. He bade her a hasty good-night, and went out to satisfy the party's anxiety.

The next afternoon, Delia Howe called and found Hagar in the drawing-room, where Mr Klemn had left her a few minutes before. Of course, she went into ecstacies of delight at finding her well enough to be down stairs, then exclaimed excitedly: "Hagar, I told you that Mr. Klemn's face was familiar, he is the gentleman who stopped our sleigh and almost proved our death that day!"

"Oh! it came to me suddenly day before yesterday, when"—evidently something had come to her suddenly now, for she looked at the magnificent new solitaire on Hagar's fore-finger, and said like one absolutely dulled by amasement: "I believe you knew it all the time."

Stealing General Bragg's Chickens.

David——remembers the battle of Lookout Mountain distinctly. He was not a man to care about being above the clouds, or to be impressed with the grandeur of the scene of action. David's attention on that day was turned toward Missionary Ridge. David's regiment charged up the ridge, and careered forward on a line that took them to a building occupied by General Bragg as headquarters. The boys were in the fiercest of a fierce fight, but still they gave the house that had acquired a sort of fame a second look. David investigated, and he found a solitary chicken in a well-preserved coop. This had evidently been held for the general's dinner, and was now in danger of being shot fifty times a minute. Dave watched the dodging chicken and the chips flying from the coop as bullet after bullet struck it, with the greatest interest, and leaving his place for a moment he ran to the coop, caught the chicken, and with chicken tied at his belt, was again in line. All had been done so quickly that it was difficult for his companions to realize that he had missed a shot. Another disappearance, and he was seen in General Bragg's kitchen, and then coming forth with a sack of meal. This he tied to his belt, and resumed his place in the line moving against the rebels on the second ridge. After the battle, he dressed and cooked his chicken, and made from the meal some most astonishing corn dodgers. He remembers that as he was eating he felt a little sorry for Bragg who, in addition to his defeat had lost his chicken. And he remembers that the boys all looked very wishfully while he was eating, but they called him a fool when he risked so much in going to the coop for the chick. David is tolerable clear in his description of the fight on Missionary Ridge, and it runs about this way: "We went up the ridge sudden like. We didn't think we was goin' up when we started and neither did the rebs. There was a mighty big fuss. We pushed ahead to Bragg's headquarters, and there we stole his chicken and some meal. Then, when we fit a good while, we cooked the chicken and eat it up and made some corn dodgers and eat them up. This was the biggest fight I was ever in."

GENEROUS.—Mr. Astor has presented to Trinity Church, New York, two golden candlesticks, nine feet high. In consideration of the fact that Mr. Astor is not accused, even by his warmest admirers, with any very marked propensity to give anything away, this action on his part may be looked upon with no less admiration than surprise. However, how it is possible that so shrewd a business man as Mr. Astor can calmly sit in his pew at Trinity and see eighteen feet of gold standing there without drawing interest? And why nine feet high, unless it be that he considers there is that luck in odd numbers that tradition asserts there is? But then, why not five feet or seven feet? We are lost in perplexity. The corporation of Trinity Church is immensely rich and is in no need of gifts of any kind, and had Mr. Astor put the money contained in these useless candlesticks out at interest for a few years it would have increased until an endownment of some sort for the poor might have been obtained from it. But, then, what has a millionaire to do with the poor? On the alter of Trinity these golden candlesticks, nine feet high, will be a perpetual advertisement of Mr. Astor and his great wealth. Coined into money and put out at interest they would attract no attention. They may possibly dazzle the members of the old church as they sit in their pews and gaze admiringly at these monuments of mammon, but they will scarcely dazzle the eyes of the Judge before whom Mr. Astor must one day appear to account for the use he has made of his wealth.

ALAS!—Another bright vision faded; another iconoclastic blow at a cherished idol! After having placed implicit faith in that story of the hatchet and the cherry tree, and consequently having acquired an overwhelming respect for the truth and honor of the Father of his Country, we are now asked to doubt both his word and his honesty. A party at Sandy Hill, N. Y., claims to hold George Washington's unpaid note, for fifteen hundred dollars, for army supplies furnished during the Revolutionary war. Can it be? Can he, who chopped a cherry tree with a hatchet in early youth and owned up to it, have departed from the promise of that youth in his maturity and left a bill for horse fodder, or salt pork, or potatoes or something of that kind, unpaid. This ought to be looked into. The existance of William Tell, the innocence of Mary Queen of Scotts and the virtue of Henry VIII, are nothing of importance, compared to this. Here is he, who was first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen, debtor to one of those countrymen in the paltry sum of fifteen hundred dollars. It cannot be.—Bring us something else, anything else, in fact, and we will believe it; but this—never! That hatchet gave no premonition of such a result.

Some Cockroaches.

"And so you left the Juliana, because of a few cockroaches?" exclaimed Mr. Whoppers.

"A few cockroaches!" indignantly replied the spokesman of the group. "Lord bless you! what do you call a few?—a thousand now, or five hundred thousand?—or five hundred thousand million billion? Why, the roaches were so thick that every step you took up and down the deck you'd kill a dozen of 'em. The captain and mates always had to fight their way forward with trumpet, spy-glass, or marline spikes, and when we relieved the wheel, a man had to get in the foretop, work his way aft, and come down by the mizzen backstay. Not a soul had been below for three months, except one poor fellow who tumbled down the forecastle hatch, head foremost, into the cockroaches. The cockroaches closed over him. He struggled for a moment, but 'twant no use—in five minutes his bones were picked as clean as my knife blade. We worked round into Santa Cruz, but the roaches on our yard-arms began to fly off in clouds to the other vessels in the roadstead, and the governor pointed the guns of the fort at us, to clear out, which we did, but then we couldn't set a rag of sail, or haul our yards round, for the roaches were so thick they choked the blocks, and devil a brace or halyard could be made to run. We floated round for a long time, all hands sleeping in the boats that we kept towing astern, until I got tired, and says I, 'Boys, let's cut and run for the Grand Canary,' which we did one night. We reached Grand Canary in safety, got across to Orrataro, in Teneriffe, and took ship for Cadiz."

"Cadiz, my dear fellow!" exclaimed Mr. Whoppers, "you did wrong—you ought to have sailed for Rochelle, or shipped at least, on a whaler. I don't know anybody better than you who could have taken a roach back; but I am much obliged to you for your yarn. It's short and it encroaches a little on the fabulous but its tough, and will do to string two or three 'to-be-continueds' on."—From Never Again, by W. S. Mayo, M. D.

SPRING FASHIONS.

PARISIAN DRESSES.

The leading exclusive modistes have returned from Paris, bringing carefully selected dresses that will decide definitely the fashions of the Spring and Summer. The polonaise, or redingote, as it is commonly called this season, and the basque with overskirt, remain the models for another season; both are equally fashionable, but there is a preference for polonaises for street suits. A conspicuous feature is the novel effect produced by doing away with side drapery, and drawing up polonaise and overskirts very short behind, leaving the side and long front absolutely smooth and plain. To add to this appearance of flat front, slender sides and bouffant back, has its three front breadths trimmed flatly with lengthwise bands, pleats, gathered puffs, or smooth melon puffs, while the back widths are covered with three full gathered bunchy flounces. To complete the effect, these skirts are tied back over the new French tournure, which is a long, narrow affair of twelve steel springs incased in muslin and worn strapped behind the person. This bustle adds nothing to the breadth of the hips, but is behind only, pushing the skirt far out backward in a slender curve, and is long enough to support them half their length, making them flow outward gracefully, instead of falling in below a projecting hump at the waist, as they have lately done.

THE LOWER SKIRT

THE HIGH STANDING MEDICI

fraise of silk or the dress material trims the pointed neck of basque or polonaise, and adds to that stateliness which promises to supersede the jauntiness so long in fashion. This fraise is bias silk three inches wide behind, when it is held in full pleats, and slopes gradually away toward the throat. It is seen on all dresses of faille. An inner pleating of white crepe lisse comes in the neck and wrists of imported dresses, and is often preferred to lace. It is sold, ready pleated, for 80 cents a yard.

WIDE SILK FLOUNCES

are made straight on many French dresses, and are simply hemmed below and gathered on a cord above. They are often arranged in three side pleats at intervals with gathers between the clusters. For edging and heading with flounces are puffs and shell scallops—ruffles three inches wide in clusters of side pleats caught over the plain spaces. The train flounce may be either bias or straight. Bias gathered flounces are very full, having three-quarters of their length added; their lower edge is turned up an inch on the outside, and with one or two tiny folds. Irregular flounces, one wide and two narrow ones below, trim the foot of skirts; a quantity of narrow ruffles around the skirt is passed.

ALL RUFFLES IN GROUPS

overlap. It is the rule to trim front breadths different from the back, and in many cases a third kind of trimming extends down the side breadths, such as puffs, folds, bars or revers. For bordering upper skirts plain edges or fringes are preferred to ruffles—thus a bias band of silk a finger length broad is laid on cashmere and other woollen dresses; sometimes a band of the dress material is used and piped on the upper sids with silk. The fringes are tied into the edge of the overskirt or garment, and are used without heading. Many overskirts are made to lap in front, and others fasten on the left side; there is also a fancy for draping each side differently.

SUPERB BLACK SILK COSTUMES

have the three front breadths trimmed with seven bias bands thickly corded on the sides, pointed and fringed below, extending lengthwise from the belt below the knee, and meeting a straight deep flounce held in three side pleats and gathers. On the back breadth are three deep flounces with shell scallops at top and bottom. Over this is a polonaise made with a double-breasted basque in front, fastened by two rows of vieil argent buttons; a standing fraise of silk trims the neck; the polonaise skirt laps in front, slopes away long on the sides, and is caught up high and short behind. The coat sleeves have four bias bands extending from the armhole to the cuff, and a plain, stiffly-lined puff is turned over the wrist.

A HUNDRED SUMMER CAMEL'S-HAIR POLONAISES

are shown at one house, with scarcely two alike. Those of ecru summer camel's-hair, with brown velvet revers down the front, velvet cuffs, epaulets, pockets, and a straight flat velvet Watteau down the back, are $175. Insertions of yak are let in the skirt. A brown velvet skirt is required to complete the costume. A novelty from Worth is a dark green camel's-hair polonaise with jacket back, military passementeries in front, swinging cords behind, and sailor scarf of camel's-hair knotted at the throat, with ends passed under the belt. With green silk skirt, the price is $1000.

A PERFECT COSTUME

for a bride has a skirt of lavender silk, with alternate black velvet and silk kilt pleating on the front breadth, and three silk flounces behind widely faced with black velvet. The polonaise of lavender cashmere, embroidered with a deeper shade, is fringed on the edges, and has a wide sash, collar, and front bows of black velvet, showing lavender silk lining.

A ROSEDAY CASHMERE SUIT

has a silk skirt with side pleating and narrow ruffles held down by a cashmere band an eighth wide. The Worth overskirt hangs open, long and plain in front and sides, is caught up high behind by a sash, and has square pockets like a polonaise; the edge is finished by a bias cashmere band like that on the skirt, piped with silk.

SUMMER SUITS.

For Summer suits thick Napoleon blue soft finished linen is imported for $1 a yard, and twenty-five yards are sold for a suit. Polonaise of this linen are wrought all over with white polka dots; others are machine embroidered with white, and sold for $35. A very simple suit of deepest blue with a vine of white brier stitching on polonaise and skirt is $35. Another novelty is toile bleu, blue linen striped with whith like bed-ticking contille. When stylishly made this is very effective, and will not become common as plain suits, cost $70.

THE NEWEST FANCY.

in batiste costume is to trim them with strong heavy Malines (old fashioned thread lace.) A row of Malines insertion is set in the polonaise, and three rows are in the Spanish flounce on the skirt. Price $125 for a suit. Among other washing dresses are lace striped percales in brown and gray goods, with white stripes and damask figures.

THE LOVELIEST WHITE CAMBRIC SUITS

have the polonaise wrought all over in open-work English embroidery, all eyelet-holes and compass-work. The skirt has a single deep flounce of embroidery. Embroidered fraise about the neck. Violet watered ribbon sash, belt, and knots at the throat and elbow complete this perfect costume.

OVER THIRTY YEARS AGO LYON'S KATHAIRON FOR THE HAIR was first placed in the market by Professor P. Thomas Lyon, a graduate of Princeton College. The name is derived from the Greek, "KATHIRO," signifying to cleanse, purify, rejuvenate, or restore. The favor it has received, and the popularity it has obtained, is unprecedented and incredible. It increases the GROWTH and BEAUTY of the HAIR. It is a delightful dressing. It eradicates Dandruff. It prevents the Hair from turning gray. It keeps the head cool, and gives the hair a rich, soft, glossy appearance. It is the SAME in QUANTITY and QUALITY as it was over a QUARTER of a CENTURY AGO, and is sold by all Druggists and Country Stores at only Fifty Cents per Bottle.

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office—whether directed to his name or not—is responsible for the pay.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it is taken from the office or not.

THE WILMINGTON & READING RAILROAD.

Berks County R. R. all Contracted for.—We are enabled to state that the Wilmington & Reading Railroad Extension—first from Birdsboro' to Reading and thence to the Lehigh River—is advancing rapidly toward a successful completion, and has, within a few days, made several important steps of progress.

The contracts for the graduation and masonry of the upper half of the Berks County Railroad, (referred to above as the extension from Reading to the Lehigh,) were arranged last week. This portion is between Lenhartsville and Slatington, and is generally light work, which can rapidly be prepared for the track.

Financial arrangements between the Wilmington & Reading and the Berks County corporation were also consummated, by which the nine miles of road between Birdsboro and Reading will be promptly built. Considerable work upon it is done, and the iron to put down the track is already provided by the W. & R., but a heavy rock cutting has impeded progress. This will now be promptly finished and in four months it is expected that the trains to and from this city will run direct between Birdsboro and Reading, over the extension, without using as now, the tracks of the Philadelphia & Reading.

Another important matter is the sale of all the remaining Second Mortgage Bonds of the Wilmington & Reading Railroad. A considerable amount of these were unsold. The improving prospects of the road have now enabled the Company to place the whole of them on satisfactory terms, and enable it to perform all its part of the development and extension.

The Pennsylvania Legislature has presented to the Berks County Railroad the right of way through the City of Reading, a passage which, as we have from time to time kept the public advised, the Philadelphia & Reading corporation was determined to prevent. The right of way is given through Front street, the same on which the Berks County road proposed to lay its rails, several months ago, under authority of the Reading City Councils. The passage of the bill by the Legislature, it is expected, will settle the question definitely, and assure to the new road its way through Reading in spite of the efforts of the old line to crush it out.

Within a year, it is confidently hoped to have our whole line, of one hundred miles, between Wilmington and the Lehigh Coal Region, via the great manufacturing district of Reading and vicinity completed and ready for operation.—Wilmington Commercial.

Two Children Murdered By Their Mother.

A horrible tragedy has been made known to the public by a doctor, who stated he had been called upon by one George Hehnessey to visit his wife at his residence, 87 Third street. The doctor went to the apartments, and upon entering the room found two children lying in a large washtub. They had both been stabbed in the neck and the bodies were afterwrd washed. Ann-Hennessey; their mother, was lying in bed in a semi-conscious condition. One of the children is a boy named George, three years old, and the other is five months old. The father said he had come home at nine o'clock and found the door locked. On forcing the door open, he found the children as described In the same room was a little girl four years old, whom the mother had spared. Her husband says his wife has been for a long time suffering from religious mania, and to this he attributes her awful crime. The woman remained gazing at the wall all night, and said not a word. She was removed to Bellevue Hospital. The two children will be buried this afternoon. Mrs. Hennessey still remains in the same condition, her mind being apparently unable to realize her position. She speaks intelligently on other matters that do not concern the death of her children. She probably will be sent to the Lunatic Asylum at Blackwell's Island.

AN ITEM FOR HORSEMEN.—In conversation with an experienced horseman, at the stock yard, on Saturday, we learned that only those horses that escaped the epizooty, last fall and winter, are taken with the disease now. A few fatal cases have occurred. "Keep the legs of your horses clean; dirt is productive of disease," said our jockey friend: "Scratches and heel cracks I cure by the following method: Wash the feet clean with warm water and castile soap. Wipe them thoroughly dry, and apply carbolic acid salve." Collar and saddle galls be cures in the same way.—State Journal.

—The Lawrence, Kansas, Journal learns that the Kiowas, Cheyennes and Arapahoes Indians are preparing for war and that the government is reinforcing all the forts in Western Kansas and south of that section. Extra troops have been ordered to the front. Two companies of calvary have already arrived and two more are on the road. There is every prospect of Indian troubles on the frontier.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. Where the parts are not gone, its effects are marvelous. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Price, 50c. a bottle, large bottles $1.00. J. B. ROSS & Co., 53 Broadway, New York.

CASTORIA is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

MAGAZINES, &C.

We have received a pamphlet from the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. entitled "How to go West," setting forth the superior advantages of their line over all others. It contains a large and correct map of the entire West with several smaller ones of different sections and a large amount of information interesting to every one proposing going West. It will be sent to any address free of charge on application to the General Western Passenger Agent of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Chicago, Ill.

In the May number of "OLD AND NEW, the two serials are continued, each with an installment too liberal for those who do not like serials, but for those who do, In "Scrop" [some papers have called it Scrape, perhaps with fatal foresight] Mr. Perkins gives us a new analysis of church organization, some fresh information about the subscription book business, which he calls "ferocious, if not practical," and some careful portrait work. Mr. Burnand carries on his narrative to his hero's going to school, there are three lively editorials, one on seaside avocations, one on translating, and one on American art, with an affectionate notice of the late Mr. Kensett, the eminent landscape painter. Mr. Hale's "Revision of the Bible" is an instructive account of the undertaking. There is a very quaint and sprightly little story called "The Parish Doll," by Miss Louise Berjou. Mr Charles L. Norton jon the staff of "The New-York Christian Union," we believe gives us a breezy paper on on caponing, called "On the Maine Coast." Miss Emily Faithfull's account of what English loyalty really is interesting to us non Loyalists. Mr. J. P. Quiney has another keen argument against exempting church property from taxation. The Examiner is unusually full of careful anq instructive accounts of recent Publications; and the Record, Fine Art, and Music department are, as usual, fresh and good. Of the two poems, one is a pions aspiration, and the other, a musical enough invocation to the spring, by Lilian Clarke.

PROSPECTUS
POPULAR JOURNAL OF Physical And Mental Hygiene
Edited By Thos. H. Helsby, M. D., and Thos. F. Mays, M. D.

This Journal is intended to popularize that department of Medical Science which relates to the preservation of Health and the prevention of Disease. The urgent need of such a periodical is felt by all classes; by none more than the Medical Profession itself.

Its pages will be devoted to upholding the claims of legitimate and rational medicine, by warning the public against the evils and dangers of the misapplication of medicinal agents, and the bold pretensions of empirics, charlatans and quacks.

It will be the constant effort of the editors to teach the community that the proper sphere of domestic and nursery effort should be, to use all the resources of Hygiene and Sanitary Science to prevent disease, but when a case of real sickness occurs, no time should be lost in seeking professional advice.

It will be the special endeavor of this Journal to point out the ethical relations between Physician and Patient, that the public may be educated to a higher appreciation of professional services, and to juster views of the powers and true mission of medical science.

It will contain original and selected articles upon the regulations of all the physical agents necessary to health, such as the influence of Air, and its relations to respiration, including ventilation; Food, its adaptation to the varying conditions of age, habits of life, and climate, with its adulteration; Exercise, as affecting the muscles, sense and brain; Physical Education, as bearing upon the health of children; Personal and General Cleanliness, and the Use of Baths; Clothing, its physiological uses, and as a cause of disease under the absurd dictates of fashion. Special attention will also be given to Medical Police, as the modifying influence of climate and sanitary legislation; Drainage, Water Supply, and the Location and Surroundings of Buildings; the Influence of various Trades and Professions upon Physical and Mental Health; the Relation of Mind and Body, and the Influence of Education upon Health.

All these varied topics will be discussed in a plain and practical manner, divested of all professional technicalities, and with the aid of all data afforded the most recent researches in sanitary science.

It is believed that such a journal will be found a valuable auxiliary to the intelligent and conscientious physician in his efforts to overcome that gross ignorance in relation to matters pertaining to medicine, which so often forms the greatest barrier to his success; therefore we invoke the aid of the profession in bringing this periodical before the public, for whose benefit it is mainly intended.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

For all the the Purpose of a Laxative medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is sounlversally required by everybody, a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use in every county and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it isa more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them: those who have not, knows that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containiag neither calomel or any deleterous drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh, and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the infernal vicera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions from the stomach' bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, BILLIOUS HEADACHE, SICK HEADACHE, JAUNDICE or GREEN SICKNESS, BILLIOUS COLIC and BILLIOUS FEVERS, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back or Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For DROPSY and DROPSICAL SWELLINGS they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a DINNER PILL, take one or two PILLS to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these PILLS makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

☞ BY ONE OF THE LEADING PHYSICIANS of Philadelphia city.—A careful examination of mortuary statistics established the fact that one adult person out of every six dies of consumption, and so alarmingly is this disease gaining the ascendancy over all other ills to which flesh is heir, that its approach to one's immediate circle is regarded with perfect horror. If you will carefully examine the records of Materia Medica you will invariably discover that the general want of success in treating diseases has not been a deficiency of pathological knowledge of the functions affected, but of a suitable compound that would act upon the disease and all the sympathetic affections.

This want has at last been met in the Bitter Wine of Iron, prepared by the celebrated Dr. E. F. Kunkle, No 259 North Ninth street, Philadelphia. This excellent compound can be taken by persons with the most delicate stomach without any debilitating effect always giving strength and largely increasing the nervous energy of the patient. In all cases of pulmonary complaints it is admirably adapted to relieve the severity of the symptoms in the advanced stages of the disease, or to arrest it in its incipiency. If you want something that will give you strength, a good appetite, build up your constitution, and in place of moroseness and a lack of energy, give you a brisk and vigorous feeling, try Kunkel's Bitter Wine of Iron. It has already received the meed of praise from thousands who have tested its virtues, and for many years maintained its reputation with unfaded popularity.

Price $1 per bottle. E. F. KUNKEL, Sole Proprietor, No. 259 North Ninth street, below Vine, Philadelphia.

LITTLE STELLA'S DREAM.

I dreamed that I saw Jesus,
Oh! beautiful and bright,
He came and stood before me,
In robes of dazzling white.

He smiled so sweetly at me—
Held out his loving arms,
As he would safely shelter me
From all earth's rude alarms.

And oh! he spoke; like music
Was each fond and gentle word:
"Let little children come to me,"
Were the heavenly sounds I heard.

"Forbid them not," he added,
"Of such the kingdom of heaven."
A little cross he handed me,
For parting token given.

So small and light, it seemed
He meant that I should wear it;
And mamma says when I am weak,
That he will help me bear it.

Oh! I will not forget that dream;
I think God really spoke
To me the same as years ago,
When little Samuel woke.

He listened and obeyed, and oft
To children God appeareth;
Like him, I too would kneel and say,
"Speak, Lord, thy servant heareth."

Children in the Woods.

A very touching story, similar to the old tale of "The Babes in the Woods," comes to us from Green River, in the town of Hillsdale. A few days since three children of John Foley, residing on the mountain east of that place, aged respectively four, six and eight, became strayed away into the woods. The first was a little girl, the other two were boys. They strayed away into the woods. The mother missed them, and blew the dinner horn all around for a mile near the house, but could get no answer. That night it rained very hard. The next day word was sent to the village of Green River by the frantic mother, and all the people turned out and went in search of the children. Every man was fitted out with bread, meat and stimulants in case they should find them. All was a vast wilderness for miles around, and so the men went in different directions.

Fears were entertained that the children might be attacked by wild beasts, as a Mr. C. Jones while hunting on this mountain had discovered three wild cats, which escaped before he was near enough to shoot them. The mother stood in the door, wringing and twisting her hands, encouraging the hunters to be vigilant, for, she said, they were barefooted and bareheaded, and would soon starve; they were never away from home before, and the nearest house was about three or four miles distant, and even to this they had never been.

About 3 o'clock a little son of Mr. Ingersoll, hunting in the woods for lost cattle, discovered the three little creatures huddled together under a tree and covered with leaves. They put up their hands and began to cry when they saw the boy Ingersoll. He led them along to the open field and so on to the house, and the joy of the mother may well be imagined. She ran to meet them, screaming and crying and catching first one in her arms and hugging that for a moment, then letting it down and taking another one and pressing that to her heart, and so on for nearly an hour before she became calmed.—By this time all the hunters had returned from the search and they too had to kiss and hold the children, and unshed tears came to the eyes of great stalwart men who had never known tears since their childhood.

One of the men took the little girl in his lap, and asked if she slept any. She replied laughing.

"Yes; I put on Johnny's cap and put my feet on Pat, and the rain came right down on me."

When found they were all wet to the skin and would most likely have died in the course of another day if they had not been found.—They say they heard their mother's dinner horn that night, but dare not leave the tree that they were under for fear of getting further away.—Hudson (N. Y.) Register.

May's Experiment.

BY MRS. B. F. DRURY.

May was tired of studying; fractions were so difficult to learn that she was in despair.

"I'll tell you, brother Fred, just what I am going to do about it," she said, one night as the two sat on the door-step watching the stars come out. "I'm going to watch for the whip-poor-will."

"How can a bird help you learn your arithmetic, I should like to know?" asked Fred.

"Oh, don't you know? Why the school girls say if you happen to be going up hill when you first hear the whip-poor-will sing in the spring, that you will go up hill—that is, advance—in everything you do all year; but if you are going down hill, or sitting still, you will go backwards, or not get on well at all in anything you do. Now I'm listening for his song, and as soon as it begins, I shall run up that little hill, and then"—

Sure enough, May kept her word, and when the bird began his cry, up hill she ran, delighted with the success of her experiment.

Monday morning May's face was radiant as she entered the schoolroom. Now she felt sure she could explain the "greatest common denominator," and as she liked to draw, she concluded it wouldn't be worth while to study much, so she would make pictures till recitation time. When her class was called, imagine her mortification when she found she could not answer a single question.

"I guess a little hard study would have done more good than running up the hill when the whip-poor-will sang," whispered Fred, as she passed him going to her seat in disgrace.

May laid her flushed face on her desk, and did a little hard thinking. I declare it was too bad for the girls to tell me such a story, and it was silly for me to believe them! I guess it is one of the things mothcalls "absurd superstitions." I'm going to begin all over again, and if it does seem hard to study, and then not have one's lesson, I guess it's as teacher says, "If a person tries to the extent of his abilities, and then fails, he is still a little farther advanced than if he had not tried at all."

So, with this morsel of philosophy gained from her unsuccessful experiment, May took up her despised arithmetic, and soon discovered that hard study solves the most difficult problem.

Agricultural.

Charleston Phosphates.

Few people are aware af the extent and richness of these immense deposits. They cover many hundred square miles and the material of purely animal origin, is actually richer in phosphate of lime than fresh bone itself. A cargo of fresh bone, for example, will yield but little over forty per cent., always less than fifty per cent., of phosphate of lime, while the Charleston phosphates yield fifty-five to fifty-six per cent. They are, therefore, actually better than fresh bone for the manufacture of superphosphates, only in their natural state they are insoluble and not available to the plant, but require to be skillfully treated with sulphuric acid.

The length of the Charleston basin may be stated at seventy miles from north to south and the width about fifty miles. The deposit varies in thickness from six inches to two or three feet. In some places it crops out at the surface, and others it lies a few feet below. It averages from one thousand to fifteen hundred to the acre. It furnishes, therefore, an inexhaustible supply of this great element of fertility. It is almost inconceivable in extent.

Just suppose there were only fifty miles square, and that the deposit would average only a thousand tons to the acre, which is very far below the actual average, and it gives us sixteen hundred million tons of bone that must have lain untouched for thousands of years! to say nothing of the millions that must have been crushed and ground up and so dissipated by the slow action of natural causes, through all the long ages since they were deposited there. The number of living beings that must have perished to build up so vast a deposit, is quite inconceivable. And there can be no doubt that it is strictly of an animal origin. That is clearly proved not only by analysis, but by the aid of the miscroscope, which completely reveals the true character of the material.

This great basin must in some former age of the world have been a favorite place of resort for land animals and birds of many kinds now quite extinct, and they must have occupied it for many thousand years to have left so many million tons of their bones. This, perhaps, ought not to surprise us, wonderful as it may seem, for when Dr. Hitchcock visited the well known region of Turner's Falls, where so many fossil bird tracks were found, some one asked him how old a certain specimen of track-bearing shale or rock might be, he replied that he could not tell exactly, but it was so old that a hundred thousand years either way would be of no sort of account. We have, then, hundreds of thousands of years during a large portion of which these deposits were gradually taking place.

The peninsula of Florida had then no existence. The gulf stream swept round by a shorter course and directly to the Carolina shores. The Charleston basin was not then elevated above the level of the sea, and it offered a protection to the coral and other marine animals that revelled in its warm waters.—Thousands of species of animal, perhaps, frequented this place. It was a sort of inland sea, where the weak resorted for protection, and the stronger for prey. It is truly wonderful, but in a practical and agricultural point of view, it may be regarded as one of the most important discoveries of our day.—Ploughman.

Feed from an Acre.

A pair of farm horses will consume in a year 6½ tons of hay and 270 bushels of oats, their daily ration being 18 pounds of hay and 12 pounds of oats for each. It will take 14 to 16 acres of average land to raise this amount of fodder. A cow will consume 18 pounds of hay and 6 pounds of corn meal daily, equal to 3¼ tons of hay and 40 bushels of corn, allowing for toll for grinding it, per year. This will require about 4 acres of average land. One acre of good corn land will produce enough grain and stalks to keep a cow during a year. This estimate which is deduced from practice, accords elsewhere, as gathered from statistics, which prove that eight acres of land are needed to support a horse during a year in Belgium and Holland—countries which, as regards the supply of food, are self-sustaining.—There would be no practical difference between the crops mentioned and others that might be chosen, for the reason that more prolific crops require a greater amount to be consumed to yield an equal sustenance, with less prolific, but more nutritious crops. The most economical single crop to raise for feeding animals is corn, when the whole stalks are well cured and properly used.

SURPLUS WHEAT IN 1872.—The Michigan Farmer in an able article on the wheat of the world, thus estimates the surplus wheat in the several countries named. The sources of information from which this article was made up, are such that we place great reliance upon the estimates:

	Bushels.
France,	20,000,000
Holland and Belgium,	none
Switzerland,	none
Germany,	12,000,000
Scandinavia,	800,000
Russia,	24,000,000
Austria, Hungary and Turkey	8,000,000
Mediterran'n countries,	none
Egypt,	2,000,000
United States,	24,000,000
Total surplus wheat	90,000,000

SPACE FOR FOWLS.—The proper space for fowls in confinement, is set down by Mr. Lewis Wright as half an acre to a flock of fifty, which should be in grass. Those desiring to breed poultry on a large scale can calculate from this basis why so many failures have attended experiments in this direction. One hundred fowls need an acre range; 1,000 ten acres; and no doubt as the flock increases over a hundred, an average of more than one per hundred would be the safer plan.

WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL,

NATURE'S GREAT REMEDY

FOR THE

Throat & Lungs.

It is gratifying to us to inform the public that Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial, for Throat and Lung Diseases, has gained an enviable reputation from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, and from thence to some of the first families of Europe, not through the press alone, but by persons throughout the States actually benefitted and cured at his office. While he publishes less, so say our reporters, he is unable to supply the demand. It gains and holds its reputation—

First. Not by stopping cough, but by loosening and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter collected about the throat and bronchial tubes, which causes irritation.

Second. It removes the cause of irritation (which produces cough) of the mucous membrane and bronchial tubes, assists the lungs to act and throw off the unhealthy secretions, and purifies the blood.

Third. It is free from squills, lobelia, ipicac and opium, of which most throat and lung remedies are composed, which allay cough only, and disorganize the stomach. It has a soothing effect on the stomach, acts on the liver and kidneys, and lymphatic and nervous regions, thus reaching to every part of the system, and in its invigorating and purifying effects it has gained a reputation which it must hold above all others in the market.

A New ERA in JOURNALISM.

The Great Achievement of the Nineteenth Century.

"THE DAILY GRAPHIC."

All the News and Full of Pictures.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC is the title of a newspaper, published in New York, which is achieving the most remarkable journalistic success ever chronicled. It is an eight-page evening paper (three editions daily), elegantly printed, and conducted by the ablest editorial talent attainable.

As a newspaper THE DAILY GRAPHIC stands in the first rank, and contains regularly

The Very Latest and Fullest News from all Parts of the World.

Its great feature consists in the fact that it is not only a newspaper, but an illustrated newspaper as well. Four of its pages are filled with choice reading matter—telegrams, editorials, general and local news, items, gossip, and correspondence on the freshest and most interesting topics. The remaining four pages consist of executed in the most faultless and artistic style and portraying accurately and fully all leading events within twenty-four hours after their occurrence. Those who have made journalism a study, and fully appreciate the great enterprise manifested in the collection and publication of news by the aid of the telegraph, steam presses, and the development of journalistic talent, have been fond of advancing the theory that the next advance in that field would result in a newspaper furnishing in its regular issues pictures of all current prominent events. That theory is a theory no longer; the newspaper of the future is the newspaper of to-day, and that paper is THE DAILY GRAPHIC. The processes which render this marvellous achievement an existing fact are the results of the most careful study and an endless variety of experiments, gradually perfected during the past twelve years. They depend upon improvements in lithography and the application of the photographic camera. By their aid a picture is engraved and made ready to print in from twenty minutes to two hours. Costly and elaborate plates, works of art, scenes of interest, are reproduced and pictured forth with equal facility and the most scrupulous fidelity. Illustrations of leading events are engraved and prepared for the press even before the accompanying written narrative or description leaves the hands of compositors.

For the proper practical working of so great an enterprise, THE GRAPHIC COMPANY was formed, with

A Capital of $500,000 in Gold, months and months before the first issue of THE DAILY GRAPHIC, the most extensive preparations were made, and to-day THE GRAPHIC COMPANY has

The Largest and Most Complete Newspaper Establishment in the United States.

In the great work of illustrating the events of the day an extensive corps of the best known and most accomplished artists are constantly engaged.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC aims to be in its strictest sense a newspaper. Striving always to be just and truthful, it discusses all questions independently and impartially. It is not the organ of any party, sect or creed. It is always high-toned, and contains nothing to offend any taste. Its contents give it an immense advantage over the "old fashioned" papers. The annual subscriber gets a volume of twenty-four hundred pages, constituting a valuable record of events and a graphic panorama of our time and progress. It possesses not merely a local interest, but is a paper for every reader of the language. It is, emphatically,

A PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE YEARS,

The Paper for the Household.

PRESENT IN THE SPIRIT.

Oh not alone though never more
I hear thy foot fall by my side!
My heart so grew to thine of yore
That when they whispered me, 'he died,'
I knew through all life's waning years,
Thy love would stay the blinding tears.

And so I walk with thee by day,
And roam at night 'neath starry skies;
And mark, thou always near, the play
Of shadows where the green hills rise,
And see the moonbeam's silvery glow
Lie soft where ocean murmurs low.

As day by day o'er mountain's height
Floated the fleecy clouds away,
And in each rugged gorge the light
In all its golden richness lay,
I felt that thy clear eyes with mine
Gazed on each vale, each mountain shrine.

When life seems clouded most and drear,
In spirit rest amy hand in thine;
And when my path is smooth and clear,
Thy smile makes all its peace divine;
Not parted, no! but at my side
Lover and friend and angel guide!

SUNDAY READINGS—NO. 12.

Every man should enjoy the good of all his labor, it is the gift of God.—ECCLESIASTES.

A wise enjoyment of the fruits of success is an expression of gratitude to him whose mercy has crowned faithful perseverance. That success is attained by personal endeavor makes it so less a subject of deep thankfulness; for how many, by some inscrutable Providence, toil zealously and long, plant and tend, yet fail of the desired harvest.

There seems upon the surface, no sufficient reasons for all the differences of a man's condition. With equal abilities and self-sacrifice, with the same unflagging zeal, two start in the race of life. One reaches the goal, the other lags far behind. It is no luck or chance, the cause lies either in sources that human intelligence fails to fathom, or in God's will. If the latter, He knows best where the blessing or disappointment should fall and his holy will is done.

It was said the wise enjoyment of success is a duty; and one of the greatest problems of life is to know how rightly to discharge the stewardship committed to willing but perhaps feeble hands. The temptation of success is to turn back all its benefits upon friends, family, self, to awaken wants that have no real foundation, and in their gratification to shut out the brotherhood of the poor, the sorrowful, and the most pitiful of all, the vicious; forgetting that the bed is softer and the food sweeter to him who forgets not God's 'little ones.'

There is no deep abiding happiness but from a sense of duty faithfully performed, and in these days of spiritual light no one can live wholly to himself without feeling, under all the glitter of wealth and pride of station, a secret discontent whose absence he would purchase if money had power to do so.

To enjoy, one must impart and greet each opportunity of doing good as a blest messenger from God, giving more than is required, He takes the visible good and bears it where open hands are waiting for the crumbs from rich men's tables; he gives the deep satisfaction that is priceless, nestling in the heart, healing its wounds and making the otherwise waste places to blossom with undying flowers.

The decision how to enjoy the fruits of one's labor, must be between the conscience and God. As serious as are human conditions, so various must the decisions be, but great principles underlie them all. It seems but a simple thing to say that all pleasures must be innocent, but were they so, had they this negative recommendation, how different the world would be. Each one is also responsible for his example, lest a weak brother be led by him to offend, examples being so much more eloquent than words.

Enjoyment must be based on a firm living principle or it fails to be what its name expresses. It is not license but liberty with God's sanction. It can be pure, deep, holy and abiding; it may be fitful, exhilarating, evanescent as the lightning that goes out in darkness. It must take religion into its realm with its sanctifying presence, or a demon may enter with its principle of misrule.

How blest are they who after patient toil can show well-won gains without the blush of self accusation. Let such not bear their honors with vain pride, God has granted the result. Paul may plant and Apollo water but the increase is not of them, the secret of growth surpasses human penetration.—While to success a pure and profound satisfaction is permitted, there is no room for a confidence that would divest itself of all dependence. Never more than in the height of prosperity does the soul need the restraint which religion brings to human weakness; aye, and how often does it need its consolations, for the heart may be wounded unto death amid the brightest and fairest of earthly scenes.

How fortunate for all that great posessions are not necessary for true happiness. The home where love is, the heart where envy is not, are lighted and warmed by rays from heaven. A contented spirit is better than all the produce of Golconda's mines, and the prayers of the grateful poor are more to be coveted than the incense of a thousand flowers.

The treasures that with God's blessings we have gathered here may be put to their highest use, that of enabling us to lay up treasure, imperishable in the eternal home to which we hasten. Responsibilities keep pace with advantages, therefore as we covet these, let us not ignore the former, but scatter as we may at the feet of those less fortunate than ourselves, some portion of the blessings that are ours through God's abounding mercy.

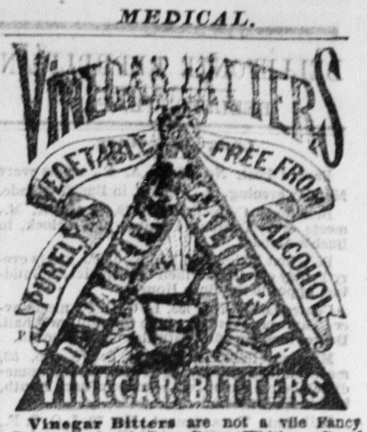
MEDICAL.



Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy Drink, made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the native roots and herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the Great Blood Purifier and a Life-giving Principle, a Perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition, enriching it, refreshing and invigorating both mind and body. They are easy of administration, prompt in their action, certain in their results, safe and reliable in all forms of disease.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain longun well, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist: There is scarcely an individual on the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics, will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS once a week.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, and Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Missouri, Savannah, Roanoke, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, and many others, with their tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc., etc. In these as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters act on all these cases in a similar manner. By purifying the blood they remove the cause, and by resolving away the effects of the inflammation (the tubercular deposits) the affected parts receive health, and a permanent cure is effected.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

The Aperient and mild Laxative properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are the best safe-guard in cases of eruptions and malignant fevers, their balsamic, healing, and soothing properties protect the humors of the fauces. Their Sedative properties allay pain in the nervous system, stomach, and bowels, either from inflammation, wind, colic, cramps, etc.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Directions.—Take of the Bitters on going to bed at night from a half to one and one-half wine-glassfull. Eat good nourishing food, such as beef-steak, mutton chop, venison, roast beef, and vegetables, and take out-door exercise. They are composed of purely vegetable ingredients, and contain no spirits.

THE CAR SHOPS: We are pleased to announce that the question of a car manufactory in this place has at last been settled. Since these works will give a new impetus to all kinds of business, it might be well to give our readers a resume of the method by which our town has been favored by having the shops located here.

Shortly after Hon. A. G. Curtin returned from Russia and before he went to the Constitutional Convention, a scheme was placed on foot by himself and Col. D. G. Bush to get parties to locate car works here. Mr. Curtin held an interview with Col. Thomas Scott, and after detailing the superior advantages that Bellefonte presented for such an enterprise, asked that he would recommend some suitable party or parties to take the matter in hand, Mr. Scott, with his usual foresight, directed Geo. C. Wilkins, Supt. of B. E. V. R. R., to come here and examine the facilities and report to him. The latter reported that iron, wood and all raw material entering into the construction of cars could be obtained here at decidedly advantageous rates. This report satisfied Mr. Scott, so that he could safely advise some of his friends to embark in the enterprise, and he accordingly placed Mr. Curtin in communication with Hon. Wm. McLellan, a capitalist of Chambersburg.

Mr. McLellan's agents came here and examined the advantages of the location. Their report was favorable, and Messrs. Curtin, McLellan and Bush met in Phila. to conclude the terms of agreement. The company asked a bonus of $10.000 from our citizens and Mr. Bush hurried home to raise that sum, heading the list with a subscription of one tenth of the entire amount and offering to give, in addition to that, the surplus water power of the Willow Bank pond valued at ten thousand dollars. Our monied men came forwad and subscribed the balance in a short time. Hon. C. T. Alexander, also made a very liberal offer of seven acres of his valuable Sunny Side farm. It is not yet definitely known which location they will take.

Work will be commenced on the buildings inside of two weeks and the management expect to have from 250 to 300 men employed within five months from the present time. The amount of capital stock will be about, $90.000 and about six cars will be turned out daily.

——A brass band composed of eight members, visited this place on last Thursday. They gave out-door entertainments which drew admiring crowds. The Undine boys heard the music and couldn't let it go without a little divertissement. That evening the youth and beauty of our town, in their gayest and best attire, danced in Bush's Hall to their hearts content. Our reporter says the spring styles for ladies, are quite sensational and very loud but withal so becoming.

The Undines looked quite distingue in their starchy dry-goods and spring toggery. Prof. Legardo has led them through all the mazes and mysteries of the art terpsichorian and nothing can excel Frank Blair, in his Russian bear dance, while Frank Montgomery rivals Dundreary himself; but for heavy solid "buckling to" Kelly gets away with all of them. Many of the Undines whose years are running down the shady side of life's meridian tried the figures but their embarrassment seemed to say cheu fugaces labunter anni; any way, we guess that the late dances are not intended for old folks, they're too rapid.

The party lasted until sometime "after night and morning meet" when all retired, pleased with the pleasures of the evening and wishing that every other night would bring a brass band and a hop.

——The beautiful memorial ceremony of strewing flowers upon the graves of fallen soldiers of the late war, will be observed on Friday the 30th of May. Arrangements will be made here and at other points in the county to pay this tribute to the memory of our dead soldiers. General A. E. Burnside, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, has issued an order recommending that in making arrangements for the observance of memorial, departments and posts take such action as will secure the co-operation of the clergy of the county in giving greater effect to the exercises of the day by preaching a sermon appropriate to the occasion on the Sunday preceding.

——On Saturday last there passed our office two of the most wretched specimens of fallen humanity it has ever been our fortune to see. To gaze upon their whisky-burned features was sufficient to cause a thrill of horror to convulse the frame of almost any man not enured to such repulsive spectacles. And yet they were human; once, no doubt, the pride of some fond mother's heart. The sight of them was the most impressive and eloquent temperance lecture we ever witnessed. The story of a ruined life was written on every lineament, spoke in every gesture of their wretched bodies, and fluttered from every rag of their tattered garments.

——An unusual number of country friends were in town on Saturday. They came on business, so they did, and not to see the show.

——Roosters are crowing, hens are hatching and pullets preparing.

——Sheep clipping has commenced, and many who glance at this item will at once repair to the barber shop.

——Our correspondents will please write on one side of the paper. We are opposed to anything but one-sided articles.

——"Medicated towels" are the latest. They are used for drying the person after bathing, and cure everything from chills to jim-jams.

——Potter township, this county, has a W. A. Kerr. too. He hadn't better come to the knowledge of the Northumberland Presbytery.

——Westler & Twitmire do business opposite the Bush House, and it is a caution how low the prices of stoves and tinware are at that establishment.

——A beautiful starry triangle is now visible in the early evening, composed of Venus in the west, Jupiter towards the zenith in the east, and Sirius in the south.

——Curtin township desires the report that she pays a sixteen mill school tax be corrected; it is only eight, and Supt. Magee says the schools of that township rank among the best in the county.

——Beautiful and joyous spring, with her bright smiles and glad voices, is now upon us, and all nature seems to rejoice. She is beginning to enrobe herself in a mantel of green, and the very birds dance and carol with joy at her appearance.

——And now the Methodist brethren of this place surprised their devout and popular pastor, Rev. M. L. Smyser, by donating to him many substantial tokens of appreciation on last Friday evening. Elder Reese did the presentation ceremony, and everything was gratifying and delightful.

——All the indications at present point to an unusually large number of summer visitors to our town during the approaching hot season, and that the summer months will be lively. Bellefonte offers unsurpassed attractions and inducements as a pleasant summer resort to the denizens of the cities.

——That Milesburg man named Trcziyulny, who is exciting so much comment among our exhanges just now, is a subscriber to the REPUBLICAN and a very fine gentleman. He always pays his subscription promptly in advance, and if there are any more Trcziyulny's who want the REPUBLICAN we will put their names on our list or perish in the attempt.

——Another joint inquest was lately held, by the Clinton and Centre county Commissioners, on the Beech Creek bridge. There is to be a new roof, the unsound timbers are to be replaced with new ones, the abutment on the Centre county side is to be repaired, and a guard wall to be put on each side of the stream, to guard the structure from logs and drift-wood.

——It is rumored that another train will soon be put on the road from here to Lock Haven. It will be called the Local Option train. It will leave this place so as to reach Lock Haven in time to give the passengers an opportunity to get their fill of fun, benzine, etc., and return about midnight. Local Option seems to have some drawbacks, but none that old mother necessity cannot overcome.

——A broth of a boy on Saturday was surprised to find it so windy; in fact he didn't fully realize the atmospheric commotion until he crossed the bridge in front of our office; then his new hat was lifted gently by a passing zephyr and wafted down to the wavy surface of Spring creek. He dropped his ginger-bread and seemed to have business down Water street, but he came back bare-headed.

——A novelty, of whatever character will attract attention, and therefore it is not to be wondered at, that J. Welch & Co.'s Book Store is receiving a large share of public notice. The variety and styles of literature in the circulating library, the curiosities in cutlery, gold, pearl and ivory pencils, the bushels of pocket-books, toys, candies, school findings, glass and china ware, are sure to attract attention. His store is tastily fitted up, the show cases are crowded with costly goods, of every description, and prices are down to the lowest figure. The establishment is an ornament to our town, and deserves the large patronage it is receiving.

ANOTHER ENTERPRISE.—Messrs Heathcote & Co., of Williamsport, manufacturers of steam boilers and oil tanks, have made arrangements to start a branch establishment in this place. The location will soon be fixed and buildings and machinery erected. W. B. Maitland, a member of the above firm, has been quite active in completing terms, preparations, etc. This branch manufactory was superinduced by the location of the car shops, as the latter will give them considerable work. Employment will be given to about thirty mechanics. Let the growth and improvment of our town continue and let the material advantages which it possesses be speedily developed and we shall soon be a city.

THE COUNTY PRINTING.—Every time Watchman says anything about the question of county printing it accuses us of making unjust attacks upon the commissioners. We never have said a word in censure of these county officials and it is a very cowardly thing for Mr. Meek to stand behind them and try to make the tax payers think that they (the commissioners) are the accused party. It is a little bit of pettifoggery that is not even smart, to say nothing of its own injustice to the commissioners. Let them and all other democratic officials beware, when they stand in Mr. Meek's way, he will sacrifice them to accomplish his own selfish ends. His victims are plenty in the county now, remember how he cut off the tuneful J. G. Moyer with one term in the Legislature and tried the same game on John H. Orvis two years ago. He has promised about all the election offices in the county to dozens of applicants from term to term in exchange for their influence and disappointed candidates have lost faith in his pseudo promises and influence, and now to make a show of fair dealing he pretends to defend the commissioners when they need no defence.

He says the Tuten office drew from the county treasury one fourth of the amount paid for county printing. This is simply false. We have never drawn a single cent from the county treasury except for publishing the Auditors, report and Mr. Meek knows it.

But the Watchman seems to have forgotten the "offers." It proposed to unite with us, and the other county papers, in a letter to the commissioners, asking them to let the county printing to the lowest and best bidder; we accepted his offer and then, as usual, Mr. Meek takes it all back. He was afraid to fulfill the conditions of his own proposition! Fred Kurtz bluntly and plainly shows the facts in the following bald headed style:

Our neighbor Meek, of the Watchman week before last, made what he supposed to be a bold strike to take from the Reporter its share of county printing. It was a wild calculation, and we tripped him on it so nicely, that he last week backs down completely and dodges behind a new "offer." Well this thing is getting too babyish on the part of "the ablest," and his latest proposition is another proof that he has been bleeding the tax-payers, for it carries with it an admission that he can bid less than he charged the county heretofore. Just what we alledge, and just what are the real facts. The job work he has done, can be done for form 25 to 50 per cent. less than he heretofore charged the county, and still be profitable. After Mr. Meek succeeds in drawing to himself all the patronage that he keeps plotting to tear away from the Reporter, it will be a question with the democracy whether he will rest satisfied unless the party makes him monthly donation visits with potatoes, cabbage, onions, and any offal that might satiate greed. We repeat, that if he feels disposed to have the job work of the county let to the lowest bidder, we will offer to do it at from 25 to 50 per cent. lower than he has heretofore charged, and give our bond in any amount to perform the contract to satisfaction. If Mr. Meek bids less than his former charges, it is proof direct that his prior charges were outrageously high. We seek to take nothing from his office; this game, remember, is all his babyish braggadocio, which overlies a jealous, greedy, "overweening vanity that flames up." Our neighbor last week was bold enough to deny the figures we give; now to satisfy every candid and honest mind, we refer to his own paper, the Watchman, of February '71, '72, & 73, for the proof that he drew $1680 for printing for the single term of "70 & 71." And we know that any printer in this section of the state would have done the same amount of work and considered it profitable at half the amount, and he now tries to direct the attention of the public from it by his bombastic "offers," which are proof of themselves that he was dishonest. Of course his simple and customary denial will be all that he can give in the face of the proof we furnish. His collecting the amount in different years, was a trick of his to deceive—that is plain—he did not have the courage to demand it all at the end of 1871, for it would have been too glaring.

—Ed. P. McCormick enlightened the Judge and jury with a few legal flashes on Monday last.

—Judge Mayer, although in il health, is presiding at the present term of court.

—Ex-Prothonotary J. H. Lipton, now the popular hotelist of Osceola, was among the many arrivals on Monday.

—Hon. Wm. Parsons, late Deputy Mayor of Lock Haven, and one of the brightest and most logical members of the Clinton county bar, called and pleased us with his classic countenance and conversation on Monday last.

—Mr. Foot, the editor of the Berichter, the German paper published in Millheim, took a look at us on Monday. He is rather a smooth looking fellow to write such horrible stuff for his three hundred Democratic subscribers, but then he has some advantage over those who can't read it.

—Samuel H. Reynolds, Esq., a leading lawyer of Lancaster county, and brother of Major Wm. F. Reynolds, of this place, has resigned his seat in the Constitutional Convention, and his place has been filled by Hon. Wm Bigler, of Clearfield, who resigned the nomination as delegate-at-large to that body, in favor of Hon. A. G. Curtin.

——Queen's circus on Saturday was well patronized by the elite, the fille de joie and sizable delegations from the various church demoninations. These latter only went, of course, to see the animals but the villainous showmen somehow or other got them under the wrong tent and the crowd was so great that they could not get out until after the baleful performance was over.

——Prof. C. W. Dale, Phrenologists Magnetist and Psychologist, lectures every evening this week in Reynolds' Hall, on Phrenology, Love, Courtship and Marriage. Prof. Dale will make persons laugh or cry, forget their names, think they are Cæsar, or Hannibal, and make them Drunk on Cold Water.

Season tickets $1.00, single admission 25 cts.

——This is the way the Watchman abuses "little Freddie Kurtz." He must be very much alarmed for his future prospects. Meek does say such menacing things; we wonder how Kurtz can sleep. Here it is:

His efforts to create dissatisfaction with the commissioners, and to disorganize the Democracy of the county will, as he will find, work only to his own detriment. The Democrats of the county know him—know that he has been laboring to create factions and fights in the party for the past twelve years, and knowing these things recognize at once the objects that induce him to be constantly yelping at members of the party while he has never a word of condemnation for Radicals or Radical roguery.

——Burnside and Thomas are one of the branches of Merchandise in our town which have acquired a deserved notoriety. There are none that stand higher in popular estimation for their extreme low prices, and their first class goods. Established for many years they have built up a reputation that all goods are guaranteed by them to be just what they are represented to be. And it is hear offer to their customers unusual advantages. It is perfectly clear in purchasing goods directly from them, you are certain to obtain a much better bargain, than any other firm can afford to give you. Whatever is stated by them can be relied on as a fact. You had better consult your interests by making your purchases from them and save twenty per cent. of your money and obtain a first class article. This firm retail goods at whole sale prices.

——Court convened on Monday at 2 o'clock P. M. Hon. C. A. Mayer, presiding. Judge Dopp was present, but the other associate, W. W. Love, did not appear for some time afterward. Proclamation was read and court opened in usual form.

Constables made returns from the different townships.

Grand jury called and sworn. Dr. J. H. Dobbins appointed foreman.

D. S. Keller Esq., late of Washington, D. C., was sworn and admitted to practice law in the several courts of Centre county.

The Constables elect were called and sworn, and after some miscellaneous business court adjourned.

Business of yesterday was as follows:

Commonwealth vs. Jacob Halderman. Assault and battery with intent to commit rape. Bill ignored.

Same vs. J. A. Lukens. Continued to August term.

Same vs. William Smith. Selling liquor without a license. Plead guilty, and was sentenced to pay a fine of $50.

The case of Geo. A. Bayard vs. D. Bush was then called and occupied the remainder of the day.

——The following obituary was received by us last Wednesday, too late for publication in our last issue. We gladly give it a place in our columns this week:

DEATH IN THE MINISTRY.—Rev. Robert C. Bryson, pastor of the church of Pine Grove, Centre county, Pa., died April 13th.

Mr. Bryson was born December 28th, 1828. He prosecuted his academic studies at Danville, Lewisburg and McEvertsville, and afterwards graduated at Princeton. He was licensed to preach in 1859, and was first installed as pastor over the church of Ashland, Pa. by the Presbytery of Northumberland.

About the year 1868 he was called to the Pine Grove church, Presbytery of Huntingdon, where he soon won the confidence, esteem and love of all who knew him. His labors were blessed in the addition of numbers to the church.

But Mr. Bryson's influence cannot be measured by the good wrought within the limits of his own church. Other denominations whose churches are contiguous are glad to attest the power of his godly walk and conversation.

On any question of reform Mr. Bryson's position was never equivocal. He took a warm interest in the temperance cause, and to his many efforts no small degree is due the recent large majority against license in this township and county. He will be remembered in Sunday school conventions as a ready and extemporaneous debater. As a preacher his manner was unaffected, and his discourse simple and full of gospel truth. His people revered him as a faithful pastor, ever ready to visit the sick and to comfort the bereaved.

Shortly before his death, one of the wildest days of March, he crossed the mountain to attend a funeral. He then contracted a severe cold, which resulted in cerebro spinal meningetis, of which he died.

From the time his symptoms became alarming, he was unconscious, so that his friends are without those testimonies of dying grace so dear to many, the want of which, however, is more than balanced by the abounding evidence of a life consecrated to God. Mr. Bryson leaves a wife and four children, besides a sorrowing congregation.

——The type-stickers on the Hollidaysburg Register say that Brainerd, the assistant editor, is the spiciest local in that section of the State. They are the only chaps who know, for it is printed so confoundedly poor that no one can tell whether it's filled with scriptural quotations, patent medicine puffs, locals or what.—Watchman.
